HELPING HANDS — National Guardsmen are usually among the first volunteers at the scene of a disaster. Training programs under tough Army standards help keep Guardsmen ready for any sort of emergency. These National Guard troops are en route from scene of an air crash.

General Kerr, who supervises administration and training of the Army National Guard's 4,500 company-size units and 400,000 officers and men, emphasizes the current mobilization readiness of the present-day Guard. "The National Guard," he says, "has already attained the highest degree of mobilization readiness ever reached in peacetime by a military force of the United States." This advanced training status now stems largely from the fact that, since October, 1958, all of the elements of the Army Guard have been fully engaged in unit training, learning to function as an effective military team by c. h. r.

One is not supposed to "work" while on vacation. For several years, Mother Brightleaf and I aim to "take off" on a little trip in January. That's the time it appears most suitable to arrange for the pay- to get out on schedule with us away. Thanks to our staff for see- ing that it works out that way. And in such little trips we aim to just plain relax.

But it is a hard and cruel world. A few minutes ago I was out on the beach, and we were having the most delightful time taking pictures with our Poloroid Camera when I realized that if I was going to get in any copy for this issue I had to "get on the ball" and get it written and mailed.

And so this is being sent off, air mail, from St. Petersburg Beach.

I have never stayed at a finer motor court, and it is right on the Gulf of Mexico, and the beach in front of us is of the purest white sand I have ever seen, and it is over 100 yards wide. We have every convenience . . . tub, shower, TV, room telephone. We have just been on the beach for nearly two hours. Our car is parked for free just outside. And it is JANUARY. You say, yes, but all that costs a lot of money. Yes, it does. Our rate, on a day by day basis is $8.00 per day. I think it is a whale of a bargain.

The above leads me to make the observation that America is becoming more and more travel conscious. It is the top way to know your nation. And, more and more, costs are getting in line. Here I am, writing this copy, with picture-proof to show that in January, I am in a bathing suit on a glorious beach with every convenience one could want . . . and it costs but $8.00 per day for the two of us.

And this leads me to observe that fabulous number of people in THE SOUTH are now making their livelihood serving the traveling public. For example, a night or so ago, we stopped over at a 44-unit motor court for the night. It was typical. We met lots how many were involved in the management, but there were bellhops to show you to your room, maids to do their chores, a hostess-in resta- . . . and I would take a wild guess and say that at least 25 people were involved in this one business. But the business to the side eastern adds up . . . the plumbers, electricians, bakeries, and all the range of suppliers . . . I would say the competition is such that the traveler never had it so well!

Now, I write this in the light of the fact that a top travel expert told me a few weeks back that APPOMATTOX should- has available at least 250 motor court units. He said that we HAD the COMBI-ON at the Surrender Grounds . . . and all we had to do was do the business with it.

I have just passed through a town with 1,800 motor court units. It was SOT a beach.

I think the biggest challenge to Appomattox in the fabulous 1960's is to cash in on the gold mine at our door . . . a famous historic shrine. And get it on a competitive basis, with prices and attractions in line.

Take for example:

We ate our mid-day meal today, glory be, at PAPPAS' Riverside Restaurant, Tarpon Springs, Florida.

We have been along this route before, but always we have breezed through Tarpon Springs and hastened on to St. Pete Beach, etc. But then, through the grapevine, I found I was missing something. Today we set off Rt. 19, and were glad we did. One way, hit a third traffic light, and then three blocks to the right, and two to the left, and all that sort of stuff and then ran into a parking problem, and the outside, or front, didn't look like too much, but I insisted that Pappas' Restaurant in Tarpon Springs was rated one of the very tops in all America . . . and I won! Ah yes . . . Louis Pappas famous Greek Salad is out of this world. I had pan fried shrimp, and Greek garlic bread. There are four in our party (Your Editor, Mother Brightleaf, Mrs. H. G. Johnson, Mrs. Clara Mitchell) and we have seldom had such a meal.

But this is going on all over the glorious South. More and more, people are flocking to DIXIE. The

1959 Brought Increase in Va. Industries

One of the top challenges facing Appomattox County as the new decade of the 1960's sets in, is the problem of securing industrial payrolls which would employ men. The community is most fortunate to have available very sizable payrolls in its outstanding garment plants. These plants provide as essential financial lifeblood for the area. And they are able to provide valued employment for a number of men. But, the fact remains that other payrolls catering to male workers would be most helpful as a project in the early 1960's.

During 1959, a total of 66 new manufacturing plants were either located in Virginia, or announced plans to locate in Virginia. Expected employment in these plants runs into the multi-thousands. But for Appomattox, new employment opportunities did not show major expansion.

The facts are that many Appomattox tox men are having to find employment in Lynchburg and other nearby payroll centers. A recent check by this newspaper found over 20 Appomattox men on just one industrial payroll in Lynchburg.

A census count of available male workers in Appomattox might not tell the true picture. The situation is such that much of the available local labor has had to go to other centers to seek employment. If jobs were available "at home" they would prefer that, rather than undergo the long daily drive to their employment. Once local jobs were offered, many would elect to work nearer home.

There were 78 plant expansions in Virginia in 1959, which increased employment considerably in excess of 4,800.

Over fifteen plants went out of business in Virginia in 1959, most of them small industries with a total employment loss of 800.

Marvin M. Sutherland, Executive Assistant for the Department, explained in releasing the report that it covered 1959 through December 15.

The number of new plants in 1959 was slightly larger than in 1958, but employment in the new plants announced during 1959 more than doubled 1958, because of a sharp increase in the number of plants with greater employment per plant.

The report disclosed that the new plants have been well distributed geographically, with a good share of large industries in the northern end of the Valley of Virginia. The Norfolk area fared extremely well in both larger and smaller industries.

Operating for the first time in Virginia is the H. K. Porter Co., with a plant in Danville and another to be constructed in Lynchburg in 1960. Other new large plants include the Inco Container Corporation and the Victor Metal Products Co., at Harrisonburg; United Piece Dye Works, near Bluefield, and the General Mowery Corporation in Norfolk. These are among the firms that employ 100 or more.

Diversity, characteristic of Virginia manufacturing, continued in evidence in 1959, the report stated. The most growth, however, was experienced in the two long-established catagories, apparel and chemicals. Apparel, including shoes, gained 11 new plants expected to employ 1275 persons. Chemicals, specifically plastics and synthetic fibers, also had 11 new plants, but as several are small firms, total employment is anticipated at not more than 900. Large new installations for synthetic fiber production are being set up by the Firestone Tire and Rubber Co., at Hopewell, and DuPont, at Waynesboro.

Apparel and chemicals were also prominent among the 78 plant expansions. The 12 apparel manufacturers which expanded have added more than 1700 persons to their pay rolls. The largest expanding general in apparels is the P. H. Hanes Knitting Co., at Galax, where operations will be consolidated into a new million dollar plant with a substantially increased work force. Four more firms have expanded facilities for producing plastics, adding some 625 employees. Very large expansions have taken place in two Northern Virginia plants producing missiles and missile components — Melpar, Inc. and Atlantic Research Corporation, increasing employment in the area by 700 to 1000 persons.

Of the 14 plants which went out of business, three were makers of full-fashioned hosiery, an industry which has declined nationally because of the growing popularity of seamless hosiery. Most of the others were in furniture and food products.

Rep. Abbitt Introduces Bill To Revise Tobacco Supports

Representative Watkins M. Abbitt announced Monday that he has introduced a bill "to stabilize the price support of tobacco to prevent its spiraling due to a decline in prices of other agricultural commodities. However, the legislation will permit adjustments for changes in farm costs so that the support level of tobacco will rise or fall in direct proportion to changes in prices paid by farmers for commodities purchased including taxes, wages and interest."

Abbitt, Chairman of the Tobacco Subcommittee of the House Agricultural Committee, further pointed out that the bill he has introduced is similiar in many respects to the tobacco bill passed by the Congress last year but which was vetoed by the President.

The Fourth District Congressman said that "it is necessary that we have legislation to stabilize the price of our tobacco so that we will not lose our export trade in competition with foreign-grown tobacco. While our tobacco condition is good, in fact better than last year, we still need this legislation for years ahead so that the foreign buyers and manufacturers will know they can get sufficient American tobacco at a fair price,"

Representative Abbitt said that he was of the opinion that the Agriculture Department will not fight the proposed legislation and if passed by the Congress it would not be vetoed by the Chief Executive.

Abbitt noted that the legislation he has introduced carries out the recommendation of the Tobacco Industry Committee and that he and others in the tobacco industry have been working on this legislation since early last fall and have high hopes that it will be speedily approved by the Congress.

"The legislation," Abbitt said, "provides that the tobacco support for 1960 be the same as 1959 and that in susequent years the support price be adjusted from the 1959 level in direct proportion to changes in prices paid by farmers using the previous five-year moving average as the base and that it applies to all tobacco for which market quotas are in effect."

Local Postmark Requested on N.Y. Invitations

Mr. and Mrs. William H. Kite, of Beacon, New York, could be described as true native Virginians, so-journeying in the North.

We are indebted to the local Post Office for this story.

This week the Kites mailed in bulk to this Post Office 50 neatly addressed engraved invitations on engraved stationery with a Confederate Flag gracefully attached. The letters bore commemorative stamps bearing the pictures of Lee and Jackson—the two most famous Confederate Generals.

Mrs. Kite wrote the following letter of explanation to Richard L. Wingfield, Acting Postmaster:

"Enclosed you will find stamped addressed invitations to a party which we are planning to give on Saturday, January 30. You will note from the enclosed sample that the invitation has as its theme Robert E. Lee's Birthday and The Confederacy. You will further note that the invitation carries a special significant stamp intended to add to the effect.

"As native Virginians, my husband and I would greatly appreciate the remailing of these invitations from Appomattox Court House.

"We feel that the cancellation showing Appomattox Court House will do much to further enhance the effect which we wish to convey. In this connection, anything that you can do towards insuring a clear and readable cancellation, will be sincerely appreciated."

The sample invitation read—

Bloodmobile Here Feb. 4

A scheduled visit of the Red Cross Bloodmobile will be in Appomattox February 4 between the hours of 11 A. M. and 5 P. M. at Liberty Baptist Church.

The last visitation, on November 26, produced 132 pints which make up the deficit from the previous visit in August and all who contributed are certainly to be commended. It is hoped that the same response is made at the next visit so that we may not have to resort to an extra visit to keep the Appomattox Chapter in good standing.

Let's all respond to this most worthy civic project in justice to ourselves and our friends.

Original Town Fire Engine, Weak and Weary, Still Survives

There may be those yet among us who recall the days when Appomattox was incorporated as a town, and when the town got to the glorious stage when it could afford a fire engine.

That first fire engine is still in existence. It is now in the possession of Mr. John D. Swinson, of Norfolk, Va.

At the corner of Duke and North Streets in Virginia's tidewater capital, the old engine is fading as to its fire engine coloring, and doubtless looks longingly at the museums which harbor such gems. A limp, black length of hose dangles from one side. It looks like something for the Smithsonian. But there she is, and the current owner is very proud of it, and not anxious to say he made a mistake in purchasing this abandoned fire engine. He picked it up in 1960. It was manufactured in 1918 by the Ford Motor Company and rebuilt by Chevrolet in 1928. It was Appomattox's first official fire engine.

Swinson says he has been offered $1,300 for the old fire engine, as is. Three flat tires, and a very rickety ladder go with it. But there is a suction hose to draw water from springs and creeks and such as that somewhere along the line there are, we hope, mechanics who might venture to get the whole gear working again. How'er, antiques are of value not always because of how well they work; rather of what they represent and stand for in history. And this old Appomattox fire engine is now in Norfolk, as an antique and working or not, would probably bring more on today's antique market than it ever cost the town. Any bidders?

(Note: Since this original Appomattox fire engine was discarded as junk, the town has acquired more modern fire fighting equipment, and the two present available engines are up to most any alarm call.)
